1 FSSAI

Section 92 (1) of the Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006 grants the Food Authority the authority to establish regulations and standards that align with the provisions of this Act and the associated rules. Following the enactment of the FSS Act in 2006, the FSSAI engaged in comprehensive consultations and deliberations with diverse stakeholders, resulting in the formulation of six principal regulations. These regulations were officially published in the Gazette of India on August 1, 2011, and they became effective on August 5, 2011.

Students in educational institutions such as schools and colleges depend on canteens for their meals. In India, the definition of "food business" encompasses cafeterias operating within these educational establishments. The Food Safety and Standards (FSS) Act, 2006, mandates the acquisition of an FSSAI Registration or License for all school and college canteens. Obtaining an FSSAI License ensures the quality and safety of food served to children in these canteens.

GITAM Deemed to be university is certified by the Government of Andhra Pradesh Food Safety and Standards Act 2006.
